Design Department News

The Sophomore 3-D classes have jointly constructed a walk-through environment in the Fullerton storefront. Taught by Meg Hickey, Sandra Moore, and Jane Corbus, the classes worked as teams during regular class meetings. Each student brought in assigned materials, and successive classes enlarged on the structures developed by previous groups. In this initial use of the storefront as an exhibit space, the objectives were working as a team working full-scale, and dealing with movement through space.

Robert S. Coppola of the Design Department has been named coordinator of Basic Studies for the Design Area.

Mr. Coppola will speak on the subject "Architectural and Design Education", at Catholic University, Washington, D.C., on Wednesday, November 10. The lecture will deal with education as a total experience -- foundation training, upper-level studies, professional work, and graduate studies.

For the past two years Boston has been developing magnet programs aimed at drawing students of different backgrounds to specific magnet schools in the city.

English High School has been designated to house a magnet art program. MCA is working with faculty at English High School to expand and extend their program in the arts.

In the Longwood Gallery alcove (next to admissions office) during the first two weeks in November there is a small exhibition of work by high school students at the English High Magnet Art Program. The exhibition includes statements by the students and teachers about the program. Please come and see.
